POWER STATION LAUNCHES NEW WEBSITE

Orange, CA, April 1, 2008 / PR Newswire / Power Station, LLC

Power Station LLC announces that it has launched its new website, which has been completely redesigned in collaboration with its corporate branding specialist, sf/o Creative of San Francisco.

The new site has been branded to better serve the Company's venue clients, especially airport managers. The website contains many features such as the latest company and industry news, improved usability, navigation and other information including all current PowerPort locations and management biographies.

The new web environment marks a dramatic improvement in the appearance and accessibility of PowerPort related information. All the 'top-level' pages of the site (homepage, news and events sections, etc) have been redesigned and reorganized in the first phase of an ongoing project aimed at improving and updating the Company's web presence. Power Station recognizes that an attractive and easy-to-use website is essential to maintain a competitive position nationally and internationally. The development of the new corporate website will phase next into a series of functions most valuable to venue customers, including secure access to sales reports and web-based access to sales, marketing and customer service people at Power Station. Through this level of functionality, the Company can deliver the finest and fastest customer service available anywhere in the industry.

"Our aim with the new website is to offer both existing and potential customers clear and understandable information on how we can help them serve their customers (the traveling public) and with their business" said Henry Mauriss, Chief Executive Officer of Power Station LLC. "The website is the easiest way to quickly and concisely display all the PowerPort models available, and why it is important for airport venues everywhere to welcome the PowerPort as soon as practical".
